

Charles Needle and Mark Johnson invite you to join us for one of nature's most flamboyant displays—autumn in the White Mountains of New Hampshire.

Few places in the world put on such a spectacle, and we have timed this workshop for peak pigmentation. Unlike many other locations, the White Mountains of New Hampshire combine a rare blend of brilliant autumn foliage set against a backdrop of majestic evergreen stands.

Besides an explosion of color, you'll be captivated by historic covered bridges, multi-tiered waterfalls surrounded by crimson-colored maples, awe-inspiring mountain vistas enveloped in fog, and charming New England villages with colorful storefronts and historic churches.

Along our route, we'll also encounter many opportunities for macro and abstract image-making: Monet-like reflections in a still pond at sunrise, a vibrant birch forest adorned with striking white tree-trunks (perfect for trying your hand at multiple-exposure tilts), and even a junkyard filled with rusty old treasures.

DATES:

October 7 – 12, 2012
(7 pm Sunday through noon Friday)

the Grandeur of Autumn in New Hampshire

When you take a workshop with Charles and Mark, you will encounter teaching styles and techniques unlike any other class. Charles enthusiastically shares methods for transforming your photographs into expressive, Impressionistic reflections of your soul. Amazingly, you'll walk away from the workshop knowing how to create these breathtaking images using nothing more than your heart and camera. Mark will blow you away with his exuberance for using Photoshop, Photomatix, and Filter Forge as tools to express your untapped creative potential. With razor-sharp clarity and a compassionate teaching style, Mark shares original techniques designed to ignite your artistic passion. The hallmark of Mark and Charles' personal work is vivid color and rich texture. New Hampshire is the ideal backdrop for making images that incorporate both.

In addition to field instruction, you will experience post-capture classroom lectures, energizing assignments, and supportive image evaluations. Field instruction emphasizes creative macro, Impressionistic, multiple-exposure, high dynamic range (HDR), and artistic architectural photography. Classroom instruction features techniques such as montaging, HDR, Impressionism, and infrared. This is a digital capture and darkroom workshop that allows you to capture images in early-morning and late-afternoon/evening light and begin experimenting with them in the classroom shortly thereafter.

GETTING THERE:

Daily flights are available into Boston Logan International Airport (BOS), a three-hour drive from Gorham; Manchester Boston Regional Airport (MHT) in Manchester, New Hampshire, a two-hour fifteen minute drive from Gorham; and Portland International Jetport (PWM) in Portland, Maine, a two-hour drive from Gorham.

WHO SHOULD ATTEND:

We invite those with a working knowledge of 35mm digital SLR camera operation and a basic understanding of Adobe Photoshop. Participants should bring a laptop computer running the latest version of Photoshop.
